SIX NEW INDICTMENTS IN JULIAN CASE SEEN

'ROUND 'N' 'ROUND

April showers bring flooded basements. No matter what the poets say about "the soft falling, life - giving, beautiful rain, it's a nuisance. It does get one's goat when you can hear the frogs croaking merrily beneath you, but you are not able to make your way to the coal bin.

And, besides, Old Jupiter Pluvius interfered very inopportunely in the Sunday ball games we wanted to see, and the youthful members of the community are driving their elders mad during Easter vacation pleading to go wading in a near-by puddle.

* * * *

Oh, well, every cloud has a silver lining, even April ones. The satisfaction in this case is the knowledge that those sweet peas that were so wilted, will have been given a new lease on life, due to the present hectic weather conditions.

New Easter bonnets, new Easter hats and new Easter rabbits are again making a drain on the savings that Dad has succeeded in accumulating since the annual Christmas orgy. Now, when he has once more filled the breach left by the Easter onslaught. Dad's bank account will again take the downward trend when the summer vacation period arrives with its demand for new spare tires, new tents, and new clothes. All is not yet quiet on the domestic financial front.

With next week to be observed as Public Schools week, the citizens of the United States are awakening to the fact that we are the owners of a great public schools system. When the elders of our community visit school exhibitions next week, they will then realize that our public school system has progressed inconceivably since the beginning of the twentieth century. They will be still more astounded by the big change in the type of education administered to the new younger generation. The three r's are still with us, but there are many new additions to the curriculum of the school of the present day. Vocational training is probably the greatest factor in modern education. It is also the aim of public school instructors to infuse into the children of our country character, a healthy physical condition, and good citizenship as well as the old stand-bys of education.

Now, we suppose someone will make that no longer wise crack about the Scatchman who would not send his boy to school because he would have to pay attention. Someone always has to break into our higher realms of thought with one of their shop worn "ticklers."

If Richmond is not a good enough city in which to be enumerated, the question has been asked if some of the teachers are consistent, in teaching in this city, and receiving compensation from the district. The real fact of the matter is the school boards should enact rules, which would compel teachers to reside here. Other cities do that very thing.

ZIEGFELD IN HOLLYWOOD

"With a talkie my Follies can play to 1,000,000 people in a short time, but on the stage only 1,000,000 people can be reached in two years," he observed. "That is one reason why I see great things for the talkies."

Ziegmeld, standing with his Titian haired wife, Billie Burke, and their daughter, Patricia, had something to say about the girl of 1930.

It was unofficially reported that the count in Richmond has passed the 18,000 mark and it is expected that when the complete count is made, the population of this city will excede the 20,000 mark.

Scribbling two notes, in which he said he was "sorry" and that "everything of interest has passed out of my life," Scott M. Willmot, 38, 3636 Illinois street, Fresno, yesterday committed suicide.

Before killing himself, Willmot scribbled two notes, one on the back of a photograph of Miss Carpenter and another on the face of an old envelope.

Two Note

The first note said: "Goodbye, dearest Elsie. I am very sorry that it has come to this. Please think of me. I love you. Scotty."

FIVE POWER PACT NEAR

LONDON, April 15.—(UP)—The five-power naval treaty, including a three-power limitation agreement by the United States, Great Britain and Japan, may be completed within the next 24 to 48 hours, a British spokesman told the press todtay.

He said, however, that the text must be referred to the various home governments before the treaty could be signed here. Just whether the document can be signed next Tuesday as scheduled depends upon the length of time it will take to receive Tokio's approval, it was said.

The British statement, indicating that the drafting committee had made rapid progress, was issued after an American spokesman said that all the powers had virtually agreed on all points in the treaty.

These points included the contingent or "esc-lator" clause permitting the United States, Great Britain and Japan to increase their naval construction in keeping with any excessive construction by the non limited powers, France and Italy.

The American spokesman declined to reveal the content of the clause, which it was reported in some circles might precipitate opposition in the United States senate.

If She Could Take a Census of Him's!

UNCLE SAM to-day sends out 100,000 census takers, whose mission is something more than to count noses. These enumerators will ask everybody some twenty-five extremely personal questions. Now it can—in fact must—be told, whether we own a home or a radio; whether we are home-makers, how old we were when we married.

MARGUERITE MOORS

There are at least twenty-five things about men which women are dying to know; also the other way around. Since census-taking is the order of the day, why should not each sex try it on, privately and unofficially, with the other? We submit the following questionnaire for young women to use—if they dare!—in taking their census of the young men of their acquaintance:

1. Are you in love with me now, or likely to fall in love, if I continue to go with you to dinner and the theatre, to be at home whenever I think you may phone, to listen enthusiastically to all the nice things you have to say about—yourself?

2. If you are in love, do you intend to ask me to wear the ring, name the day and help you pick out the apartment—or are you one of the men who doesn't want to be "tied down" by marriage, who prefers to be "just good pals"?

3. Are you playing around with some other girl, whom you like better than you do me?

4. How long is it going to take you to come to the proposal point?

5. Do you have an idea that I'm smashed on you, or am I—as I fervently hope—keeping you guessing?

6. Were you really out of town, that time you didn't phone me for a whole week?

7. Would it make you jealous, or just sore, if I went out with somebody else next Saturday night?

8. Did your mother bring you up to wait on her, or did she wait on you?

9. How much money are you really making?

10. What are your chances of making some more?

11. Have you saved anything?

12. How much?

13. Do you expect a wife to cook all your meals, sew on all your buttons, darn all your socks, echo all your opinions, endure meekly all your grouches—or are you willing to let her keep her individuality and the work which she may prefer, provided she sees to it that you are not neglected?

14. Are you as good-natured before breakfast as after dinner, or do you arise all set to bite the hand that pours your coffee?

15. If you should marry me, would we be able to afford a car?

16. Will any one of your relatives have to live with us, or we with them?

17. Are you the kind of man who growls if dinner isn't ready within five minutes after he returns home, or if the remainder of the Sunday roast appears as a stew?

18. Do you believe that your future wife should do whatever economizing may be necessary, while you retain for yourself all the luxuries of bachelor life?

19. Do you think a husband should be boss—or try to be?

20. Do you consider that it's foolish for a man to keep on buying flowers and candy for a girl after he marries her?

21. If we were married, would you always love me just as much, even when I wasn't young any longer?

22. Would you make me live in the city if I wanted to live in the country, or the other way around?

23. Do you understand women—or think you do?

24. As a husband, would you always make me happy?

25. Would you try?

BUSINESS GIRL

All day I file away old bills,
Or tap the keys of an adding machine;
I greet the customers with a smile—
I'm business-like—efficient—keen.

I take dictation quick as scat,
My knees demure beneath dark blue.
They look at me and say, "She's good!
A business woman through and through."

How can they know, if I don't tell,
That charts and letters I scarce see?
I am a very good machine—
I do them all mechanically.

But over there, beyond the file,
A shining kitchen I have made,
With pots of bloom and firelight,
And a table being laid.

And I am there in linen crisp,
And some one coming home I see
On hurrying feet, from toil like this—
So what are charts and files to me!

And theirs shall be the jilted hearts that grieve,
And mine shall be the queer unrest in you.

Caring for Plants

One woman who has excellent results starts her seeds in shallow cigar boxes in the house. This enables her to put them in the ground without disturbing the plants. She just breaks away the sides of the box from the soil and slips the bottom off with a knife. She does this when the plants are about two inches high. As the roots are not disturbed the growth of the plants is not interfered with and the plants do not lose their vitality. Then when they have attained a higher growth and are stronger she thins them out and being accustomed to this soil they continue to thrive.

THEATRE FASHIONS

By Helen Worden

PHOEBE FOSTER, in "Topaze," wears the graceful hostess gown of flesh-tinted chiffon, contrasted by darker cream lace, sketched at left. A cape bertha, tied fichu-fashion at the front, offers an interesting neckline. At the right is Judith Windsor, who wears a dull blue tweed one-piece sports frock in "The Old Rascal." A square neckline ornamented by a silver buckle and a normal waistline accepted by a semi-crush belt, also trimmed with silver buckles, lends it chic. The softly draped hat is of a deeper-toned felt. Blue leather bag and sandals complete the ensemble.

The World's Window

By Pierre Van Paassen

PARIS, April.

Daudet On Flanders

Now that Leon Daudet has settled down again in Paris after two years' "exile" in Brussels, he is writing his impressions on the land that gave him hospitality. His observations, however, are far from pleasing to the Belgian officials. In the first place he refers to Belgium as "Low Countries" in the title of his six volumes which he devotes to the subject. But this is not the worst. Daudet says that he could "neither find Belgium nor Belgians." He found Flemings and Walloons, that is to say, "one nationality Dutch or Netherlandish to the core" and "another group Walloon or of French stock and predispositions." "If there exists a nation in Belgium," says Daudet, "it is represented by the Flemings . . . the bells of Flanders sing far into the interior of Holland; we have heard them in Middleburg and on the shores of Zealand where the Schelde flows, just as we heard them in Brussels and in Bois-le-Duc, among the same people, among the same houses, and near the same churches. How alike are the people of Holland and Flanders. Brussels is a Flemish city, but so is Bois-le-Duc!" The people of Flanders and Holland are not only alike, they are exactly the same tribe. They speak exactly the same language, with regional dialectical differences, of course, just as the Parisian accent differs from the Lyonnais and the Normandian manner of speech. The tortuous attempts to make the outside world believe that Flemish is only a peasant dialect which has no connection with the Dutch language is refuted by the powerful campaign now in progress which does not demand longer "In Flanders Flemish," but "In Flanders Dutch," just to show that Dutch is the language of the people. Daudet's inability to "discover Belgians" anywhere in Belgium is but a repetition of an old saying of Destree, a statesman who once wrote to King Leopold: "Sire, there are no Belgians!"

Wells and Barbusse

An interesting discussion took place recently in Paris when H. G. Wells and Henri Barbusse met for the first time and fell to talking about the situation in Russia. Barbusse, of course, defends the present regime in Moscow and he believes sincerely that it holds the salvation of Europe and the regeneration of humanity, but Mr. Wells also thinks the revolution in Moscow a most useful experiment that should be encouraged and enlarged. But the two men had a hopeless falling out and came near a violent quarrel when Mr. Wells touched upon the subject of violence and the ruthless enforcement of the Communist ideology which the Soviets pursue. Barbusse held that the Soviets represent a new conception of the world, that they have a duty to defend themselves with all and every means at their disposal "in order to keep the ideal that they represent intact and inviolate." "This means that the end justifies the means," said Wells, "a very dangerous doctrine." "I do not condemn violence simply as violence," came back Barbusse. "There are instances where a cause can triumph only through violence. I have discussed this point with Romain Rolland, who is against all violence, the same as Gandhi. Still, in India the attitude of Gandhi is like that of a blind prophet. The established order of things has benefited by Gandhi's long campaign of non-violence." "Not for long," remarked Wells. Wells believes in the might of ideas. In this he is a successor of the great liberals and rationalists of the eighteenth century.

Transferred Favorites

What killed the passion for picture postcards of theatrical favorites? asks somebody in the Manchester Guardian. At the height of their popularity postmen were ever burdened with endless pictures of Mary Pickford, Rudolph Valentino, Pola Negri or any of the other film celebrities. Since these famous ones only lived—for their public—in photographed form, perhaps it was felt that another type of photograph had no great attraction. As a matter of fact, the rise of the "picture paper" may be suspected as the real reason for the failure of the theatrical picture postcard. The decay of the one and the triumph of the other dovetail neatly into each other in point of time; when you can see your favorite actress or actor a dozen times a week in the illustrated papers, to say nothing of their advertisements, there is less reason for buying up postcards of the admired mummer. At the same time, half-tone blocks are a poor substitute for a real, shiny photograph; nor can they be propped up on mantelpieces without some preliminary stiffening. All things considered, it is to be feared that we no longer worship beauty as we did.

Practicing

"I'M VERY much worried about Mabel," a mother said to me the other day. "She's getting terribly deceitful."

"What did she do?" I asked.

"Well, she's supposed to practice an hour, and the other night she deliberately turned the clock ahead fifteen minutes!"

Poor little Mabel! Wasn't she sorely tempted? Isn't it almost too much to expect a seven-year-old to sit for a whole hour at the piano, playing uninteresting scales and such, while the joyous voices of her playmates are coming in through the open window? We must look at things through the children's eyes. They sit in school until late in the afternoon, until every muscle in their bodies and every thought in their minds are crying out for play and exercise. Then after a short playtime they are called into the house to practice and do their home work. Is it strange that sometimes they openly rebel or, if not courageous enough for this, that they use some subterfuge to shorten their agony?

"But children must practice if they are ever to learn to play an instrument," you may insist. So they must! But if you are considering the child and his needs you will shorten the practice period. More important even than his musical education is his physical and mental health! Physicians have told me that more children have been made nervous and even ill because of music lessons than one can imagine. Fifteen or twenty minutes are enough for a young child to practice, and that same amount of time at two periods during the day should suffice for the older youngster. Of course I am not speaking of the child who expects to be a professional. He is in a class by himself.

How hard it is for the little child to sit at the piano in a room all by himself, even for this short period. Wouldn't it help him tremendously if mother brought her sewing into the room where he is playing and encouraged him by her interest and by an occasional commendatory word? As he grows older and finds real enjoyment at the instrument he will not need this company and encouragement.

Let us be careful not to develop a hatred of music in our youngsters by continually nagging them about practice. Don't we give them music lessons because we feel that a knowledge and mastery of this art will contribute to their happiness? Let us beware lest we awaken actual dislike!

And let us remember, too, that it is not absolutely necessary for every child to play a musical instrument. Perhaps our youngster would gain more by studying art, carpentry, cooking or something else instead. Let us give our child the thing that will help him most! But if we do decide to give our youngsters a musical education let us be most careful in our selection of a teacher, choosing one who will inculcate a deep love for this great art!

TELLING THE WORLD

By Neal O'Hara

IT'S ALL IN THE NAME

A MONTH has gone by since they discovered that planet and it hasn't been named yet. It is up to science to get busy. For even if we christened it to-day, it would be 2,537,000 years before the planet knew it.

There are quite a few factions scrapping over the planet's name. One group wants to call it Hercules, Bacchus, Vulcan or some mythological name. Others demand a modern monicker. The best offer we have heard so far comes from the Literary Digest. The Digest is willing to conduct a poll to determine whether we shall name the planet Pansy, Rover or Lindy.

The Anti-Saloon League objects to this offer. The League claims if the Literary Digest conducts the poll, the wets will grab a majority of the ballots and call the planet Old Taylor.

Another proposition is to have Calvin Coolidge name the new celestial sphere. If Mr. Coolidge can write the history of the United States in 500 words, it would be no trick at all for him to write up a name for a planet that is six times larger than the earth. They are willing to pay Mr. Cooledge his established rate of $2 a word for composing a name for the planet.

A suggestion that has also met with favor is to have Thomas A. Edison quit stewing goldenrod for a couple of weeks and invent a name for this infant of the solar system. Mr. Edison has politely declined. In fact, on account of his deafness, he hasn't even heard of the planet yet.

Henry Ford is in favor of calling it Model X, and has offered to put a spare rim around it, such as the planet Saturn has.

The notion of calling the planet Lowell, after the Harvard professor who discovered it, has been definitely dropped. Research established the Lowells speak only to God, and the planet is not high up enough in the heavens to break down this fine old tradition yet.

An idea that is gaining ground daily is to hold the matter in abeyance until another planet is discovered and then call them Amos and Andy.

Meanwhile, with opinion sharply divided, Planet X languishes up there in the solar system, a waif on the doorstep of the Milky Way. We hope it is getting its four-hour feedings, for this planet was not born with a Big Dipper in its mouth.

As a matter of fact, we might as well have let the House and Senate Tariff Committees decide on a name, for all the progress that has been made.

The different factions are bound to continue their wrangle and the upshot of the matter will be that the planet is finally named like this:

A pretty girl from every country of Europe and each of the forty-eight States will be picked by a complicated process and sent, passage prepaid, to Galveston, Tex. There they will promptly don one-piece bathing suits and promenade on the Boardwalk till all but one will drop out from sunburn or exhaustion. The remaining girlie will be crowned Miss Universe.

At the end of the third night, after the banquet and ball, Miss Universe will gather under a bunch of spotlights and pick a name out of a derby. That will be the new planet's name.

And the chances are that the planet will be Christened Rudy or Paramount or Crisco.

A DISH A DAY

By Karen Hollis

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1930

With the profusion of fresh vegetables now in the market at reasonable prices, the housewife who observes Lent can find plenty of inspiration for savory, appetizing dinner menus. Old, familiar ingredients can be prepared in such a way that they become a tantalizing novelty on the table.

KAREN HOLLIS

In preparing a well-balanced meal one must be careful to select a variety of vegetables that make a pleasing combination and provide all the elements that are healthful and nourishing. Equally important is the appearance of a dish when it is ready to be served, for unless it looks tempting the cook has failed in a most important part of her work.

Cooking vegetables en casserole, combined with macaroni or rice, is a modern and popular improvement on the old-fashioned vegetable dinner. Innumerable combinations can be made, according to the individual taste. Here is one that has proved very popular.

VEGETABLE CASSEROLE

2 cups rice
1 small cauliflower
4 carrots
1 cup peas
1 stalk celery
1 small onion
2 cups milk
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
3 tablespoons grated cheese
2 tablespoons bread or cracker crumbs

Steam the vegetables or boil them in a small amount of salted water. Steaming is a saving of labor, if you have a steamer kettle that is divided in small sections, as the vegetables must be cooked separately in order to retain their individual flavor. Pour the rice slowly in vigorously-boiling water to which a teaspoon of salt has been added, and cook from eight to ten minutes. Double the time allowance if a double-boiler is used.

When the vegetables and rice are tender, make a white sauce by blending the flour in melted butter, and adding the milk, a small amount at a time. Stir this constantly while it is thickening, add the onion which has been finely chopped and allow it to boil for a minute.

Put a layer of the rice—about one-third of the amount cooked—in the bottom of a generously-buttered casserole, mix the vegetables with another third of the rice and the white sauce and add them. Use the last of the rice for a top layer. Sprinkle the top with cheese and bread crumbs and bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, for fifteen or twenty minutes, or until thoroughly browned.

Do You Make Faces?

IDLE question. Rarely does the grimacer realize her fault. Another one of the things that only your best friend can tell you—but rarely does.

Now there are some grimaces that actually exercise the face, tone up the muscles, you know, and lure new blood into the tissues. Alas, though, there are other grimaces, the kind that are made by you and me, which bring us no benefit. They bring only lines, bags, puckers, droops and so forth.

FRANCES OLIVIER

Some day soon we are going to write a whole leaflet-ful of facial exercises—funny faces scientifically worked out to strengthen the muscles of face and throat and keep the skin elastic, radiant and young. Watch for this little bulletin. You're going to love it!

Meanwhile let's think about the funny faces we all make—to our detriment. The scowls that accompany our questions. The frowns that come with problems, mostly trivial problems too. The narrowing and hardening of the mouth when disapproval is felt. The crowsfeet that doubt engenders and the unlovely mouth lines that peevishness induces.

There is some excuse for the faces we make when we are harassed, unhappy—but with good cause, you understand. There is neither excuse nor reason, though, for the thousand and one funny faces that are made through sheer habit.

Haven't you seen people sew, cook and shove furniture about with their faces? Haven't you sometimes felt yourself doing the same? We have, tons of times.

Watch yourself if you are the expressive type. Try not to emote over trifles. Even important matters are scarcely worth getting wrinkles over.

If the face problem is the result of habit, then the solution must be found also in habit. For the very bad and unbeautiful habit of grimacing let us substitute the very good and beautiful habit of looking serene. Just think of the wear and tear we can save our poor overworked, overexposed faces!

It Is Said—

If you polish the curtain pole and rings with a little furniture polish after they have been cleaned you will be able to draw the curtains more easily.

COMEDY STAR TELLS OF SUIT

Langdon stated that he paid T. J. O'Brien, then the husband of the present Mrs. Langdan, $15,000 cash and had given the two promissory notes to avoid an alienation of affections suit. He said he had known the woman as "Miss Walton."

In his affidavit, questions concerning his residence in Mrs. O'Brien's home and costly presents were blocked by Langdon's attorneys. He married Mrs. O'Brien last July 27, after his wife, Rose F. "N. Y. NIGHTS" MAKES HIT HERE

"New York Nights," which opened at the Fox-California theater last night with Norma Talmadge showing in her first musical talking picture, is a thrilling melodramatic production, rich in romance, rich in power and richer still in its entertainment values. It is an example of intriguing big town atmosphere plus a dominant and popular personality.

A lavish display of sets, crowds music, comedy and a sincere romance laid in that picturesque belt of New York City known as Tin Pan Alley were intelligently woven into a pleasing whole by Lewis Milestone, Hollywood's ace comedy director.

Taken as a whole "New York Nights" is 'a radical' departure from the numerous plays about Broadway's theatrical people that have preceded it. It is essentially a lively story with a logical and understandable plot pleasingly presented.

As a background to this plot is laid the glamorous night life of the most famous street in the world, with its song writers, chorus girls and sinister racketeers.

As "Jill," the chorus girl wife of "Fred Deverne" (Gilbert Roland,) Miss Talmadge creates an unforgetable character of delightful appeal and paradoxical moods —a character part whimsy, part pathos and thoroughly real.

Gilbert Roland, who plays opposite the star, does excellently in the difficult role of "Fred Deverne" a potential star lyricist who sells his honor and the only worthwhile song he ever wrote for a drink of booze.

John Wray, the distinguished playwright-actor, is an excellent "Joe Privid," a sinister partner of the underworld and a finished actor. Lilyan Tashman is her usual best self as "Peggy," the chorus girl. Roscoe Karns and Mary Doran complete an excellent cast of capable players.

"New York Nights" starts and finishes in a fast tempo of action —night clubs, wild party scenes —shootings and dance music by two famous recording orchestras are part and parcel of the drama. There are no moments of dullness in the picture.

"New York Nights" was adapted from the successful stage play "Tin Pan Alley," by Hugh Stanislaus Stange. It is another big time United Artists picture.

On the same bill is a Taylor Holmes comedy, "He Loved the Ladies."

PAINFUL CORNS

Loosen—Lift Out

A little known Japanese herb, the discovery of an eminent German scientist (Dr. Stickel) instantly soothes the corn, callous or wart, then loosens it so that shortly you can lift it right out. This new discovery called "Corn Fly" excites the white blood corpuscles to action and granulates the corn at its root so that it drops out and leaves no trace of scar or soreness.

You will also find "Corn Fly Foot Bath Powder" a boon for sore, tired or perspiring feet.

"Corn Fly" for corns, 35c, "Corn Fly Foot Bath Powder" 25c, and "Corn Fly Bunion Remedy" 50c, (all three—$1.10 value—for $1.00), are sold under a positive money-back guarantee by Hi-Gene Co., Newark N. J., or local druggist.

3 More States To Educate War Orphans

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 15. —The plea of the American Legion for the various states to enact scholarship laws to aid World war orphans in obtaining an education has just been met by three more states, according to telegraphic advices to National Headquarters from Major General P. C. Harris, U. S. A. (Ret) of Washington D. C. who is national director of education and vocational training of war orphans for the Legion.

Maj. General Harris announces that scholarship acts have just been passed in New Jersey, Virginia and Kentucky and that it is expected that several other states will enact similar measures during present sessions of the legislatures. Among the states where scholarship acts are now under consideration by legislatures are South Carolina, Massachusetts, New York and Mississippi.

Four other states, Utah, Maryland, Delaware and Connecticut, have already passed war orphan scholarship legislation. The Connecticut act appropriates the sum $200 a year for each child to be used in paying for tuition, matriculation fees, room rent, board, books and supplies. This money is paid to the educational institution. The laws of Utah, Maryland and Delaware are similar except the appropriation is $150 a year.

The small amount of compensation an orphan receives from the federal government is not sufficient, General Harris said, and it is necessary that they receive state aid as well as aid from other sources. The government compensation is $10 a month for one child and where there is more than one in a family, it is $6 a month for each additional child.

Pacheco Rites Held Yesterday

Last rites were held for Antonio Pacheco, Rodeo merchant, yesterday at St. Joseph's church, Rodeo. The remains were laid to rest in St. Joseph's cemetery, San Pablo. Arrangements were conducted by Curry's parlors.

Pacheco was killed in Oakland on Saturday. A large number of friends from the entire county gathered yesterday to honor the Rodeo merchants.

GRETA GARBO IN TALKIE HERE

Jacques Feyder's European fetish for weird camera angles even included the still camera when he directed "The Kiss" Greta Garbo's new starring picture which will come tomorrow for two days at the Fox California theater as a Metro Goldwyn Mayer feature.

Following Feyder's instructions that the still's be photographed from the same angles from which the moving scenes were shot, Milton Browne, Miss Garbo's stillman, had to rustle up a collection of "baby" tripods and stepladders from which to take his pictures. The result was one of the most unusual set of stills ever obtained.

Feyder has made use of European mechanistic theories in filming the picture and has produced results which are interesting not only from the aspect of their novelty but also from an artistic viewpoint.

Conrad Nagel plays opposite Miss Garbo and the supporting cast includes Anders Randolf, Lew Ayres and Holmes Herbert. The picture is sound synchronized.

On the same bill is "Congo" a thrilling adventure story filmed in sound. A Laurel and Hardy comedy, "In The Hoosegow" completes the bill.

IDEAL WEATHER AIDS ARMY FLIGHTS

SACRAMENTO, April 15.—UP—Nature provided an ideal setting for the Army Air Corps field exercises here today. Pursuit planes were given orders to intercept and attack bombardment craft flying at an altitude of 2000 feet. Ordinarily it would be necessary to stimulate concealment for the pursuit planes.

Today high fleecy clouds floated at an elevation of 3000 feet, affording a natural cover behind which the pursuit ships lurked in wait for their pretended enemy, the bombardment group, and the attack planes, guarding the big bombers.

The spectacle was offered directly over Mather field and several thousand spectators watched the bombers and attack planes sailing along, suddenly to be attacked by a group of 20 or 30 tiny pursuit ships dashing out from behind a cloud.

Roaring straight downward at 180 miles an hour, the pursuit squadron would be met by the attack group, zooming up at them to protect their charges, the bombardment planes.

A technical victory was awarded the pursuit planes by the judges for their skill in concealing themselves. Although the bombers shunned the cloudy areas they were caught several times by the hornet like pursuit planes as they hurtled down on their unsuspecting foes.

Preliminary tests will begin tomorrow on guiding of a hugh twin motored bomber by a tiny mechanism, which steers the plane. It will be taken aloft by pilots who will then turn the controls over to the robot pilot.

Army official assert that the ship will be steered with greater accuracy, precision and judgment than human hands eyes and brains possesses.

The principle of the gyroscope is employed in this robot pilot. Pulses are set up which brings the position back to normal.

It is expected that the mechanism will be invaluable during weather when visibility is bad.

Grain Board Leader Turns In Resignation

CHICAGO, April 15.—UP—W. G. Kellogg, one of America's most prominent figures in the grain business, resigned today as general manager of the Farmers National Grain corporation, subsidiary of the Federal Farm Board.

He also rescinded his vice presidency of the National Grain Stabilization corporation to re-enter private business after three months as one of the principal factors in the federal government's attempt to stabalize the price of wheat.

During the time he was in actual charge of the corporation's activities, said the announcement of his resignation, its income was such the organization was prepared for the handling of the 1930 grain crop out of its own profits.

Kellogg was understood to have given up his own extensive private grain businesses to become manager of the corporation under a three year contract at a salary of $35,000 a year.

His resignation had been rumored for several days from the National Grain corporation, but there was no inkling that he also would sever relations with stabilization corporation.

Officials of the two organizations would only say that they accepted his resignation "with regret." They refused point-blank to give any other reason except that advanced by Kellogg himself, who said that "pressure of other affairs requires my undivided attention."

Kellogg, 39 years old, is recognized as one of the nation's foremost figures in the grain business. He has been connected actively with the wheat trade for the last 20 years and during that time has made business connections which are national in scope.

GIRL SLAYER HELD TO COURT

EUREKA, April 15.—UP—Clarence L. King, self-confessed murderer of Mrs. Minnie McCoy, whose body was found in the redwoods north of here some weeks ago, was held to answer in Superior Court today on a charge of first degree murder.

Justice Frank E. Niskey bound King over to trial after hearing the testimony of the district attorney, S. E. Metzler, Coroner Oscar Swanson, Autopsy Surgeon C. T. Wallace and James Bowie, a workman, who found the girl's body.

Following the verdict, King was returned to the county jail, where he was held without bail. He was calm throughout the hearing, showing no emotion.

A large crowd thronged the courtroom, although it was a foregone conclusion that King would be held to answer.

A battle is expected at the trial, date for which has not been set, between the prosecution which will endeavor to prove the murder was cold-blooded, and the defense, which is expected to bring forward a plea of self-defense.

LOS ANGELES, April 15.— UP —The outstanding team marriage of Hollywood—Colleen Moore, the actress and John McCormick, the business manager, reached its legal breaking point today when Miss Moore filed suit for divorce in superior court here.

She made the charge of mental cruelty and suffering and gave a few instances.

From the tone of the complaint it was not expected to be contested.

A property settlement has been arranged, it was said a few weeks ago, when their separation became definitely known

Miss Moore charged that McCormick had ordered her friends from the tennis court of their home, was frequently in an ugly mood, during which he spoke vulgarly to her guests and often was absent from home.

The blend
that revolutionized smoking

THE INCOMPARABLE BLEND of Camel Cigarettes is probably the most important discovery in the history of smoking. It made cigarette smoking popular. Camel changed the smoking habits of the nation and has given pleasure to more millions of people than any other cigarette.

This exclusive blend assures in Camel a smoothness, a mildness and a mellow fragrance that cannot be imitated. It preserves all the excellent qualities of the choice tobaccos of which Camels are made and melds them all together into a delightful harmony of smoke pleasure. It sets Camel apart as a cigarette of distinctive character and provides for Camel smokers the very highest form of smoking luxury.

MAJOR LEAGUE SEASON OPENS IN EAST

NEW YORK, April 15.—UP—The 1930 baseball season opened in seven major league cities today, with all the thrills, surprises and unexpected turns of the national pastime packed into the games.

Nearly 200,000 fans saw the seven games, with the largest crowd, 45,000 at the Giants-Braves game at the Polo Grounds. Rain prevented the Indians and White Sox from opening the season at Chicago and cold weather held down the attendance at Detroit.

The Athletics won their opening game from the New York Yankees at Philadelphia, 6 to 2. Simmons ended his salary dispute just before the game started by signing a contract for a reputed sum of $20,000—an increase of $2000 over last year's salary—and hitting a home run with Mule Haas on base on his first appearance at bat in the first inning.

Lefty Grove blanked the Yankees in every inning except the fourth, when a wild throwa by Jimmy Foxx permitted two runs. Grove allowed but six hits, and hung up nine strike outs.

Tony Lazzeri contributed the prize "bone-head" play of the day by rolling the ball to the pitcher's box with only two out in the third, thinking there were three out. The play paved the way for a Philadelphia run.

The Chicago Cubs, National league champions, won their opening game from the St. Louis Cardinals before 13,000 at St. Louis, 9 to 8. Seven pitchers took part in the game, the Cubs using three of their stars, Blake, Bush and Malone, before the Cardinals were finally halted in the ninth.

Sugar Sweetland, Phillies' southpaw, turned in the greatest pitching performance of the day, by blanking the Robins, 1 to 0, before 27,000 at Brooklyn. Sweetland allowed but three singles and not a Brooklyn player got on base in the last six innings.

The Phillies won the game in the eighth when Sweetland doubled, took third on a sacrifice and scored on Chuck Klein's single after Lefty O'Doul, National league batting champion, had fanned on three pitched balls.

Daglia Hurls Oakland To 3-0 Victory

SAN FRANCISCO, April 15.—UP—Coming from behind in the last three innings the Los Angeles Angels defeated Hollywood today 4 to 3 and held the advantage of more than a full game over the San Francisco Seals and Oakland.

Sacramento went in the first division by beating Portland, 6 to 2, while the Seals were trouncing the Missions, 8 to 4.

Daglia, Oakland pitcher, let Seattle down with three hits and the Oaks won, 3 to 0.

Hollywood went into the lead of the contest at Los Angeles by scoring once in the fourth. The Stars counted again in the fifth but the Angels tied the score with two in the seventh and the winning run was made in the eighth.

Four runs made by the Seals in the third inning and four more in the eighth and ninth gave them a total large enough to survive the Mission's ninth inning rally.

Sacramento broke a tie in the sixth inning and scored four runs later.

—UP—George Williamson, U. S. C. pitching ace, held St. Mary's to three hits here this afternoon while his team mates slammed out a 4 to 0 victory over the Gaels.

Oak Ice Team Beats Chicago

OAKLAND, April 15.—UP—Oakland, champion of the California Ice Hockey league, defeated the Chicago Black Hawks in an exhibition game here tonight, six to two.

The only Chicago scores were made by Ingram in the second period and by Ripley late in the third period. Two points were made for Oakland by Boken and the other scores were Dafoe, Giroux, Saundercook and Buddy Cook.

ST. MARY'S COLLEGE, April 15.

BOMBO TELLS OF THREATS IN PROBE

SAN FRANCISCO, April 15.—(UP)—Leon "Bombo" Chevalier, 216-pound negro who was knocked out last night by Primo Carnera, giant Italian, testified today before the California boxing commission that he had been threatened with death if he "did not take a dive" before the end of the tenth round of the encounter.

As Chevalier completed his testimony, Bob Perry, who acted as the negro's second, stepped into the crowded, tense hearing room. It was Perry who threw a towel into the ring in the sixth round after Chevallier had been down once. Up to that time Chevalier had outfought Carnera easily.

The commission ordered that Perry's license to act as a second be suspended indefinitely and postponed the investigation without setting a date for another hearing.

Perry Seen

Witnesses at the hearing said they had seen Perry talking to Frank Churchill California representative of Carnera, several times before the fight and Churchill visited Chevalier's corner during done anything to hamper Chevalier during the fight.

Tim McGrath, Chevalier's manager, testified he was astounded when Perry threw in the towel two minutes and 15 seconds after the sixth round started, while Chevalier was fighting valiantly, and said he was confident that Chevalier could have finished the ten rounds.

Chevalier and his wife were the bout. Perry denied he had the other witnesses.

Split Told

They told of being assured at least $900 as Chevalier's end of the purse, and Chevallier charged that Bob Laga, his chief second, had told him "you can't win this fight." Laga claimed the statement was not correct.

"On the way from my dressing room Perry told me I'd have to lay down," Chevallier testified. "I told him I wouldn't do it, but that I was going to do my best to beat Carnera. Between rounds he put grease on my face that hurt my eyes and burned my mouth. He scalded me with it. Perry said: 'I'll kill you if you don't take a kayo punch—or I'll blow your heart out'."

During the hearing Louis Parente, who promoted the bout, Chevalier and McGrath declared willingness to restage the match admitting all persons holding the stubs from their tickets for Monday night free. Additional receipts would be turned over to charity.

Churchill Absent

Churchill was not present and when informed of the proposal said it would be undoubtedly rejected by all of Carnera's business associates. He was asked if Carnera would fight Chevallier again for $10,000 or 50 per cent of the gate recipts and replied that an entirely new agreement would have to be drawn up and indicated that Carnera would want more than that.

Commissioner Charles Traung, in charge of the investigation, announced he could suggest a rematch, but could not demand it. In addition to suspending Perry, Traung said he would question other witnesses between now and Monday night, including Churchill, reporting to his associate commissioners, William Hanlon and James Woods. He also plans to offer a new rule that will do away with all towel throwing in California rings henceforth, by making a fighter's chief second go into the ring.

Game Deputies To Hold S. F. Convention

SAN FRANCISCO, April 15.—The second annual convention of the volunteer deputies of the division of Fish and Game of the department of natural resources will be held in this city on April 26 and 27, according to the announcement made today by Capt. Walter R. Welch, in charge of the volunteer organization. Over 550 volunteer workers in the cause of conservation will be present for the convention.

The morning session on the opening day of the convention will be devoted to the registration of deputies, the interviewing of bureau heads of the division of Fish and Game and conferences with the volunteers and the regular officers of the commission.

In the afternoon, the program will be staged in the assembly hall of the Merchants Exchange building. Many of the foremost conservationists of the Pacific coast will be in attendance at this session to lead the discussion of wild life problems. The convention will end with a competitive pistol shoot which will be held on the morning of April 27, at the Presidio pistol range.

The purpose of th's convention is to acquaint the volunteer deputies with their duties in cooperating with the regular patrol force of the division of Fish and Game and to give them instruction in the best methods for the carrying out of these duties, as well as to instruct them as to their status as law enforcement officials.

The system of volunteer deputies inaugurated in 1926, has grown in importance, until at the present time there are 550 men engaged in this work exclusive of the 400 members of the U. S. Forest Service, who are also in the ranks of the volunteer game and conservation law enforcement officers. These men are under the direct control of the division of Fish and Game, and are required to make regular monthly reports to the captain in charge of volunteer deputies.

ODD FELLOWS NINE MEETS Y. M. I.

The Y. M. I. nine of Berkeley will travel from the college city Sunday to offer opposition to the Richmond Odd Fellows on the San Pablo diamond at 2:30 o'clock.

Orr will start on the mound for the local lodgemen, while Guaidoni will do the receiving for the Richmond boys.

The Berkeley Y. M. I. nine comes to Richmond with a fine reputation gained in competition with other Eastbay aggregations, and the Odd Fellows may expect a hard battle at their hands on Sunday. However, the Richmond ladgemen are veterans of long and high standing in local ball leagues, and are expected to be one of he main rivals for the city twilight league cup this year. Sunday's contest will be their first game of the year.

Spit is a horrid word, but it is worse on the end of your cigar

Smoke CERTIFIED CREMO!
More than a damning social fault . . . spitting is a filthy, menacing habit . . . especially when it fouls the things you put into your mouth! Why run the risk of cigars made by dirty, yellowed fingers and tipped in spit? Remember, more than half of all cigars made in this country are still made by hand, and therefore subject to the risk of spit!
Certified Cremo protects you against this abomination! Every tobacco leaf entering the clean, sunny Certified Cremo factories is scientifically treated by methods recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture. And its purity is safeguarded along every step of the way by amazing inventions that foil, wrap and tip the cigars without the possibility of spit!
Try a Certified Cremo—see how wonderfully good it is! Made of the choicest, tenderest leaves that the crop affords, we claim Certified Cremo's quality is tastier than that of any other cigar. Don't let its 5c price stand in your way. Your physician has in mind a cigar like Certified Cremo when he recommends a mild smoke in place of heavy brands.
Crush-proof . . . immaculate . . . foil-wrapped . . . Certified Cremo is the kind of cigar the late Vice-President Marshall undoubtedly was thinking of when he said: "What this country needs is a good 5c cigar!"

School nurse says all girls should know this

TALKING to a roomful of high school girls on personal hygiene, an experienced district nurse said: "One of the basic rules of health for girls is to keep the system functioning naturally at all times. Normal exercise and diet habits should be encouraged. But when necessary there's no harm in taking nujol, since it works mechanically and can't disturb the normal functions of any organ of the body. Particularly with girls, there are times when nujol should always be taken. Take a spoonful every night for a few days. It's a thoroughly safe and harmless method. It won't cause distress or gas pains or griping."
Nujol is different from any other substance. It contains no drugs or medicine. It can be taken safely no matter how you are feeling because it is so pure and harmless, and works so easily. Every woman should keep a bottle on hand. Every druggist has this remarkable substance. Get the genuine.

SYNOPSIS

Having fled from New Guinea, where he was robbed by O'Shane, David Wade and Stella Blackney, wife in name only to O'Shane, who is to claim his rights on the death of the girl's mother, sail to the South Sea island of Motogaru and begin trading with the natives. Stella quickly comes to fear that Moira, a half-caste girl of the island, will win Wade, whom she has come to love, away from her if she learns they are not married. She is very much upset when Moira's dying father asks them to look after his daughter, but they agree to carry out his wish.

CHAPTER X—Continued

"I know! I know!" she cried, suddenly a little distracted.

"Well, then, why do you hesitate?"

He leaned across the table to her, a movement which had in it a hint of accusation.

"I have a feeling, Stella," he added slowly, "that you don't like her."

"And I have a feeling that you do!" she shot back. "At any rate you are very concerned for her."

"Naturally! As far as Melrose is concerned, you promised for both of us." There was an unwonted sharpness in his blue eyes. "I thought you would have welcomed this opportunity for the companionship of another woman.

"I don't think I ever have been so glad."

Though she is a half-caste, you must admit she is no ordinary half-caste. Have you anything against her?"

"I don't like the idea of anyone else living here, David," said Stella. "This is our house, yours and mine. You can understand that, can't you?"

"Women are strange creatures! I'm hanged if I understand you at all! Your changeableness beats me. Remember how, when we first came to this island, you declared, that you loved it? And how, an hour or two later, before you had been ashore even, you said you hated it? And now this! With all your heart, apparently, you promised Melrose to look after his daughter—a sacred promise, mind you, made to a dying man—and here you are wanting to go back on it! It is all very extraordinary, I must say!"

Assuming a dignity she scarcely felt, Stella rose.

"If you are going to talk like that, I have nothing more to say," she said evenly, and went to the doorway, to go out on to the veranda and along to her room.

"And still we haven't settled the question of where Moira is to live," said David.

She did not turn.

"Just do whatever you wish," she said in the same even and dignified tone, and left him.

In her room, she cast herself on the bed, face down, her head upon her arms. The rain was swishing the roof again like a pattering of innumerable small feet. A complexity of emotion surged over her, like a breaking sea.

A quiet footstep sounded on the mats of the floor. She thought it was David, and made no sign that she had heard. Then she felt an arm about her, and the voice of Lo-oru came comfortingly:

"Not cry, sinabada! Please not cry!"

Stella turned and sat up. "I am not crying. I have nothing to cry for."

A sudden feeling of shame that the native should have discovered her distress had come to her. She felt that her trouble was her own; that certainly it had nothing to do with anyone else—particularly a little half-savage as this.

"You will be good friends with him again soon," said Lo-oru gently. "Always is it the way with men and women. Manua and me—often we have row, big row, call one another names, because we are angry. But by and by the anger goes, and we are good friends again, and we come sorry we said the names, and he says plenty how much he likes me, and I say plenty how much I like him. Tomorrow you and him will be glad with one another just like before you get"—she paused involuntarily — "married."

"Leave me now, Lo-oru," she said, abruptly. "It was good of you to come; but I don't need you.

"It has come to a pretty pass that I should think of seeking comfort from a savage!" she thought bitterly as the girl went out. Pride had joined the complexity of her emotions, and was dominating it. She let it have its way. It came to her that she had suppressed her pride a little too much lately.

All through the morning the succession of squalls swept up, sometimes one swishing the rear of the other, sometimes a full half-hour between them; but midday saw the last of them and return of continued sun; and soon afterwards came Moira. Accompanying her were her crew-boys carrying her baggage.

"It is just wonderful of you to have me here, Mrs. Wade," she said, when she stood on the veranda; and her eyes were filled with gratefulness. "I have never met a woman like you before. I told you how women usually treat me. I—I—well, I don't know what to say."

Stella glanced down at the store-room. David was attending to the trading natives. She hadn't met him since their talk at breakfast.

"It was my husband who was responsible for your coming here," she said.

The half-caste indicated by her manner a belief that this was merely a conventional disclaimer.

"I don't think I have ever been so glad of anything as I was to get the message this morning inviting me here. The schooner is filled with associations of father—you know how it is: all kinds of little things. I felt I just had to get away from it, even if it meant having a house built for me on the beach. And that would have been dreadfully lonely."

So, thought Stella, David had lost no time in inviting her, sending a messenger through the rain and all! And the half-caste had been very, very prompt in her acceptance!

The crew-boys had brought her baggage on to the veranda.

"Your room is here," said Stella, with forced evenness, and led the way. The natives carried the things into the room and went out. Moira looked round the room, a splendid figure in the softened light. Then she took Stella's hands, and her fine eyes were shining.

"I shall try and be a worthy ward, dear," she said, and kissed the white girl's cheek.

"May I come in?" came David's voice from the doorway. As he entered he smiled at Stella, obviously pleased at sight of the embrace.

"Getting fixed up all right, Miss Melrose?" he quieried breezily.

To Stella the kiss was like a sudden wound, stinging and acute. She trembled, as from pain of it, and felt herself pale. And she expected the kiss she would have shrunk from it, pretended to misunderstand. As it was, she was glad the subdued light prevented David from seeing her paleness and agitation.

"I have just been telling your wife how much I appreciate your kindness in having me here," said Moira. "At least, I have been trying to. But I suppose I have to thank you as well." She held out a hand. "All I can say is: Thank you."

"Oh, that is all right!" said David with a careless air, and changed the conversation, a circumstance for which Stella was grateful.

For the remainder of the day Stella was given much to introspective thought. The gratitude of Moira had touched her deeply. It was a gratitude so transparently sincere that Stella was acutely conscious of a sense of shame. She rebuked herself, called herself mean and vindictive, declared with intense conviction that it was not herself who had behaved and spoken as she had at breakfast, but another and inferior Stella.

It was curious that love could change one, she thought. Just because she loved, and feared she could not hold the object of her love, she had been metamorphosed. All that was bad in her had come uppermost; all that was good had been swamped. It was the kind of thing that had happened to O'Shane.

She fought it back. She had come here to work out her problem calmly, coolly. She loved David Wade, and she feared to lose him. Those were the premises. Like a child at school, she repeated them, impressing them upon her mentality. Her distress was caused by a combination of these two things. Because of them she was a changed person. Because of them she had become a mean and inferior individual. Then one of these things was wrong, or both. The question was: Which?

At about 11 o'flclock he parked near Twenty-third street and Gaynor avenue and sat waiting in the car, according to Mrs. Edward Andrade, 2175 Gaynor avenue, who said that she noticed him sitting there. hSe declared that he was either reading or writing. It is believed that he was scribbling his farewell notes at that time.

About one o'clock Miss Carpenter left her apartment and walked rapidly toward the hospital. As she passed Willmot's car, he hailed her. She refused to pay any attention to him.

After she had passed, Willmot got out of his car, drew his pistol and fired one shot into his head. He died almost instantly.

She declared that she did not stop to talk to him because she believed he had been drinking.

Relatives Told

It is believed that Willmot came to Richmond from Long Beach. In his pocket was found a business card for a Long Beach automobile agency.

In an inside pocket of his coat $111.10 was found. He had with him a bank book from a Los Angeles bank, showing that he had a balance on hand of $2. A receipt for $2 for board bill for one week, signed "J. E. M." was also found in his possession.

Coroner Wilson immediately notified M. Willmot at Toranto, Can.

COURT UPHOLDS TRADE NAME RIGHTS

PHILADELPHIA, April 15 — Judge Thompson, presiding in the United States District court for the eastern district of Pennsylvania, has just handed down a decision in favor of Vick Chemical Co. in its case against Frederick E. Strohmeier, in which emphasis is placed by the court upon protection of the buying public against fraudulent use of a trade name, Vick Vapo Rub.

"The defendant will be enjoined," Judge Thompson's decision reads, "against use of the plaintiff's trade name, as he has been using it, to deceive and perpetrate a fraud upon the public, and, by pirating its trade mark, to injure and damage the reputation the plaintiff has built up.

"A decree may be entered for an injunction accordingly and for damages sustained by the Plaintiff and profits derived by the defendant from his acts of infringement and unfair competition."

This case grew out of the action of Strohmeier in the marketing of a cough drop which he claimed, on the package, was "Medicated with Vicks Vapo Rub" As to this alleged medication, Judge Thompson says in his decision:

"I find from medical testimony that, as manufactured, there is no real medication by means of Vick's Vapo Rub in the defendant's product. That being the case, that statement of medication is false and untrue . . . I am not satisfied . . . that the defendant has introduced any testimony sufficient to sustain his claim that Vick's Vapo Rub is used at all in his cough drops."

Vick's Vapo Rub is the sole product of Vick Chemical company, and has been marketed for a number of years. It was introduced in evidence that over $7,000,000 has been spent in advertising to establish this product, in the confidence of the public, and the extent of such confidence was disclosed in the evidence that over 260,000,000 jars have been sold since 1910, throughout the United States and in over 60 countries abroad. It was charged that the defendant, Stroheimer, by pirating the Vick trade name, was trying to establish his unknown product by associating it in the public mind with Vick's Vapo Rub, thus not only accomplishing an infringement, but perpetrating a fraud upon the public. The decision of the court upholds this charge and enjoins Strohmeier from further use of the Vick trade name in connection with his product.

V. F. W. LAUDED AT VETERAN MEETING

"The V. F. W. of the United States is riding on the crest of a wave of enthusiasm," said H. W. Winn, of Emeryville post, and senior vice department commander of V. F. W. lodges in a talk before a meeting of the local group in Richmond Memorial hall last night.

Winn continued, "Nation wide interest is being focused on the V. F. W. of the United States through its construction achievements along legislative lines, its National Home at Grand Rapids, Michigan, the activities of the National Americanization committee and its various other endeavors.

"Supplemented by the fundamental reasons for increasing patronage, may be added the great recognition from the press and an outdoor campaign which gives the organization more than $100,000 in billboard space.

Therefore, it is urged that every comrade should preach the doctrine of veteranism, open wide the doors and keep the V. F. W. in the forefront. The V. F. W. is without question the fastest growing organization in the country."

Winn's speech was greeted with marked enthusiasm by the veterans who thronged Memorial Hall to hear the address.

D. J. Hall, of Alameda post, department inspector, was also present at the meeting and delivered a few words to the gathering.

Ralph Mitchell, of Astor post, Oakland, and Roy Johnson, senior vice commander of Emeryville Post 1010 were also present.

Two candidates were initiated last night and a banquet was served by William Dahl and Robert Fulton.

the raiders. It is believed the still has been in operation since March 1.

Atterbury and Brown were arrested when they drove into the ranch with the two trucks loaded with sugar. They told the raiders their only connection with the plant was to haul sugar.

Lieut. E. W. Brock, of the Oakland police department, identified the two men as those found at the home of Morris Halpern, 1812 Forty-sixth street Oakland, following a police raid against an alleged liquor distributing center at 2307 Market street, Oakland on April 1.

New Raid

The Market street raid also resulted in the arrest of Halpern and two companions, Brazillio Maita and Salvadore Maita, who are awaiting trial before the Federal court in San Francisco for violations of the national prohibition act.

When the men were searched at the Market street raid, Brock declared there was not sufficient evidence to arrest Brown and Atterbury. At the time, according to police reports, Brown was carrying receipts showing he had carried a load of merchandise over the Carquinez bridge.

According to police and federal agents, the still near Napa and the Oakland distributing plant, are connected in one of the biggest illicit liquor industries on the Pacific coast.

DAVIE MUM ON STADIUM CHARGE

OAKLAND, April 15.—UP — Charges that Mayor John L. Davie of Oakland had failed to account for the disposition of funds assertedly raised in a campaign to provide the city with a new stadium, were made today by Rev. F. M. Ui'sley, pastor of the First Presbyterian church.

The minister further charged that the deed to the lot said to have been purchased for the stadium site, was subsequently turned over to Davie's son.

No answer to the charges had as yet been made by Davie.

Meanwhile, there were three developments in the Oakland and eastbay graft and bribery scandals.

The grand jury, after opening a new investigation of the conduct of the sheriff's office during Burton F. Becker's incumbentcy, with a possible view toward bringing a criminal indictment against Becker, dropped one count from the indictment against Cromwell Ormsby, attorney, after Earl Warren, district attorney, pointed out that the jury had failed to indict Becker previously on the same evidence. The charge concerned asserted protection money paid by a Chinese lottery owner.

Six contractors appeared before Superior Judge E. W. Engs, and pleaded "not guilty" to charges of subornation of perjury. Trials of Milton Moore and John Heafey were set for May 29, and those of C. D. Eatsa, John Bowersmith, Archibald Borland and Philip R. Johns, set for May 22.

Trial of three former bootleggers and two alleged bootleggers on charges of conspiracy and bribery, continued, with William Mathews, San Leandro cigar store proprietor testifying concerning protection alleged to have been offered him by an asserted "go-between" between the sheriff's office and the underworld.
